Marquita Rockamore is the founder of Rockamore Coaching and Training, providing professional development training, career and life coaching services. For more than 15 years, Ms. Rockamore has facilitated workshops on a myriad of topics for audiences at various stages of life, of many races, socio-economic statuses and cultural backgrounds. She facilitates professionalism workshops to new and potential hires addressing the importance of critical thinking, teamwork, integrity, communication, workplace etiquette and empathy in the workplace.

Previously, Ms. Rockamore was a trainer for R.E.A.C.H. to Lead, a leadership workshop for dislocated managers and business owners. She served as a Project Coordinator, H.R. Manager of Monitoring & Evaluation and Case Worker Supervisor for the City of Cleveland's Department of Workforce. At the City of Cleveland, Ms. Rockamore was involved in several projects and collaborations connecting residents to funding for college or training and employers to skilled talent in Northeast Ohio. She has over a decade of policy development and process improvement for audit compliance under the US Department of Labor's Workforce Investment Act and Empowerment Zone program.

Ms. Rockamore's higher education experience includes serving as a Program Manager for the Job Link Services Department of the Workforce, Community and Economic Development (WCED) Division at Cuyahoga Community College. There she cultivates relationships with businesses and organizations, assisting organizations in locating talent in the college's student body through experiential learning experiences, employer meet and greets, featured employer series, career and job fairs. Ms. Rockamore established, recruited, managed and, for approximately three years, chaired the WCED Division's IT and Healthcare Employer Boards.

As an advocate for more prosperous and sustainable communities, Ms. Rockamore is a member of the United Way of Greater Cleveland's Financial Stability Impact Committee, the Great Lakes Bridges Out of Poverty Steering Committee, and the National Career Development Association. She works within these groups to increase greater access to resources around basic needs, healthcare, educational attainment and job skills for all.

She holds a Master's Degree in Management and Leadership (MAML) from Liberty University, a Bachelor of Arts in Sociology from the University of Akron and is a Certified Global Career Development Facilitator (GCDF).
